Cultural operator – who are you?

Name and country	National Library of Armenia
Organisation type	State Non-commercial Organization
Scale of the organisation	As of April 1, 2026 the NLA employs 319 staff members
PIC number	879086848
Aims and activities of the organization	The National Library of Armenia is the leading institution for the preservation, development, and international promotion of Armenian written and printed heritage, serving as the world's largest repository of Armenian publications and the national center of bibliography. As a key scientific, cultural, and information hub, the Library plays a central role in safeguarding cultural memory while ensuring its accessibility and relevance in the digital age. The Library's core activities encompass the systematic collection, cataloguing, preservation, and dissemination of Armenian and international publications, alongside the continuous development of advanced information services. It holds extensive and unique collections, including globally significant artifacts such as Urbatagirk (1512), Azdarar (1794–1796), and Hamatarats Ashkharatsuyts (1695), which position the institution as a custodian of heritage of international importance. A major strategic priority of the Library is the large-scale digitization and open access dissemination of its collections. Since 2012, it has implemented ambitious digitization initiatives, making over ten million pages of materials accessible worldwide and contributing to the global visibility of Armenian cultural heritage and research resources. The Library actively contributes to education, research, and public engagement through exhibitions, professional services, and the Museum of Printing, which presents the evolution of Armenian book culture and publishing traditions. It continuously develops user-oriented services and innovative approaches to knowledge sharing, supporting the transition toward a knowledge-based and digitally empowered society. International cooperation is a cornerstone of the Library's activities. Through sustained partnerships with leading libraries, cultural institutions, universities, international organizations, and the Armenian diaspora, the Library facilitates knowledge exchange, promotes intercultural dialogue, and strengthens the global presence of Armenian heritage. Guided by its mission, the Library aims to be a dynamic, accessible, and forward-looking institution that advances cultural diversity, supports research and education, enhances information accessibility, and actively contributes to cultural
